

If you're over 65... Know the FACTS

... about the limitations of Medicare coverage for people like you.

Actually designed to handle short-term hospitalization, Medicare covered less than 2% of the $35 billion spent on nursing home care in 1985.

But there is an alternative. Duncaster, a New England retirement community planned for people like you, offers a secure, independent lifestyle worth looking forward to, and complete health care when and if you need it... all at an affordable, inclusive cost.

Call or write for a brochure, and mention your school and class.

Edward Allen Folger

of Surfside, Nantucket, Mass., died on June 8 at the Veteran's Hospital in Brockton after a courageous battle with emphysema.

Following a year in the U.S. Navy, Al graduated from the Choate School in 1947, and subsequently from Dartmouth, where he majored in art. Painting remained the focus of his life; his landscapes of the New Hampshire mountains and of the moors and shoreline of Nantucket are highly prized by family and friends.

Al had close ties with Dartmouth. He grew up in Hanover, where his father, Joe Folger '21, was a professor of Romance languages for 38 years. His mother, Marion Folger, was well known for her many roles in productions of the Dartmouth Players.

He is survived by his daughters, Martha Methot and Anne Love, his mother, six grandchildren, and by his brother, David Folger '53.

suffered a cerebral hemorrhage on March 19 and died two days later. At the time of his death, Fred was president and chief executive officer of State Mutual Life Assurance Company. He had distinguished himself in his career, much as he had done throughout his life. He was an outstanding scholar-athlete in high school and at Dartmouth. Following a master's degree at Tuck, and the army, he joined State Mutual as a security analyst in 1957. Fred rose rapidly in State Mutual's investment organization to the senior executive position in 1968. He was elected president in 1980.

He further distinguished himself by being committed to a host of industry and community organizations ranging from the Life Insurance Association of Massachusetts to the United Way to the Worcester Boys Club. He was a benefactor and supporter of Assumption College and was to be honored by a doctoral degree. Fred often commented that he liked "high tides, sunrises, and my glass half full." With this eternal optimism, he bravely confronted leukemia which was discovered late in 1988. The leukemia brought about the condition that caused the fatal stroke.

Fred and first wife, Barbara, had four children—Jacqueline, Brian, Mona, and Frederick III—all of whom survive. Fred also leaves his second wife, Rosalind.

In his eulogy, close friend and classmate Byron Menides said, "Fred's zest for life, love for family, his integrity, character, courage and consideration will live with us forever."

James M. Campbell

an attorney with the New York City Commission on Human Rights, died at his home in Brooklyn on May 15. Jim had joined the Commission in 1986 in the law enforcement bureau and helped to re-draft the Human Rights Law and rules of practice. He also worked on the AIDS panels of the State Bar Association, the National Lawyers Guild, and the Greater New York Hospital Association.

After Dartmouth, Jim went on to the University of Oregon Law School where he received his law degree. He was originally from Denver, Colo., and came to Dartmouth as a National Merit Scholar from Mapleton High. Surviving are his parents and brothers David, Craig, and Bruce.

known as Rick, died September 10, 1988, while visiting his parents in Trenton, N.J.

Rick came to Dartmouth from Princeton Day School and pursued a double major in Spanish and government. He was involved in several college activities including the Government Department Steering Committee, the Class of 1980 Student Council, the Gospel Choir, the Daniel Webster Legal Society, and the Afro-American Society. He was also active in several foreign-study programs. In the spring of his senior year he was a language teaching assistant in Spain.

After graduation Rick joined Texaco and his first assignment was in Puerto Rico. Later he was transferred to Panama.

Rick then attended the J.L. Kellogg Graduate School of Management at Northwestern University. At the time of his death, Rick lived in Phoenix, Ariz., where he was with the Eastman Kodak Company as a national sales account executive.

Rick's sister Karen '76 writes, "My brother had so much to offer this world but the Lord found it necessary to take him from us. In addition to his language fluency, Rick was an accomplished artist specializing in etching and sculpture. He also became a reading teacher in a local literacy program and periodically read to the blind. At his death, he had begun writing his autobiography."

In addition, to Karen, he is survived by his parents, Arthur and Gloria Turner.

died unexpectedly on April 30, in Kenya. An affable and outgoing person, Omondi was a member of the crew team, the rugby club, and Psi Upsilon fraternity as an undergraduate. He came to Dartmouth after schooling in Nairobi and at the Leighton Park School in England.

After his family hosted several Dartmouth students in the environmental studies foreign study program, Omondi decided to attend the College. He went on to offer alumni and fellow students a chance to glimpse his homeland, guiding safaris through Kenya's game parks.

An engineering major, Omondi had been in residence in Hanover as recently as the fall term of 1988 and needed one more term to complete his graduation requirements.

Omondi is survived by his parents, Drs. Christopher and Anna Obura, his brother David, and his sister Soraya.
